

How do you get all this information?

We gather most of the information to contact the candidates from the individual county web sites, and through Election Commissioner's offices. Not all phone numbers are available, but addresses are. (If phone numbers are not findable, we do mail questionnaires.) After locating phone numbers, candidates are called (usually by someone with that candidate's name on his/her ballot), given the opportunity to respond to the questions online. [The technology for that service still in process.] They also can answer by email, fax, snail-mail, or on rare occasion to answer questions on the phone.
